With Flying Angels Teamwork Ensures Success

The key to Flying Angels' success is our extraordinary team of Flight Coordinators and Flight Nurses.

Our Flight Nurses truly are "Flying Angels." They accompany and care for our clients in the air and on the ground all around the globe. Each one of these Flying Angels is a registered nurse with a minimum of five years Critical Care/Emergency experience, a graduate of a nursing program accredited in the United States, and a professional who has been fully trained in flight physiology.

Our Flight Coordinators are essentially our team leaders. These Flying Angels are masters of organization and logistics. Working closely with our dedicated travel agent and collaborating with family members, hospital staff, airline personnel, and many others, they design and execute complex medical transport plans for a wide range of patients. Our Flight Coordinators have a minimum of five years of flight nurse experience and are specifically trained in flight coordination.

Safety and Seating Guidelines

Seating Standards: Due to the space needed to safely transport patients on commercial aircraft, Flying Angels clients always travel in business or first class seating.

Special Patients: Flying Angels takes each patients' unique medical needs into consideration when planning transports. Although most patients fly with a single Flying Angel, we assign additional medical personnel when necessary.

Medical Equipment Needs: Flying Angels provides our clients with all medical equipment required for safe transport. We have portable oxygen concentrators readily available for travel, and we provide suction machines, stroke chairs (reclining wheelchairs), and other medical equipment.

Airline Specific Considerations: Flying Angels' awareness of each airline's specific medical requirements allows us to expedite medical clearances and prepare appropriately for each flight.

Unusual Circumstances: Occasionally, itinerary changes are necessary during transport due to unpredictable weather and other unusual circumstances. Flying Angels anticipates such situations and updates our client's families and medical professionals frequently throughout transport.
